

another

maybe you don't think that what you need right now is another book — another book to stack on top of other books to make you tall enough to reach a light bulb, to make your bookshelf look more impressive, to roll a joint on, to use as a doorstop or as a paperweight in a high wind, or to make a straight line when you can't find your ruler — it's not on any reading list, not "required" or "strongly recommended," it's not another book that "hasn't come in yet" in the bookstore, and you won't have to pay an overdue fine or read it on closed reserve — because this isn't just another book.

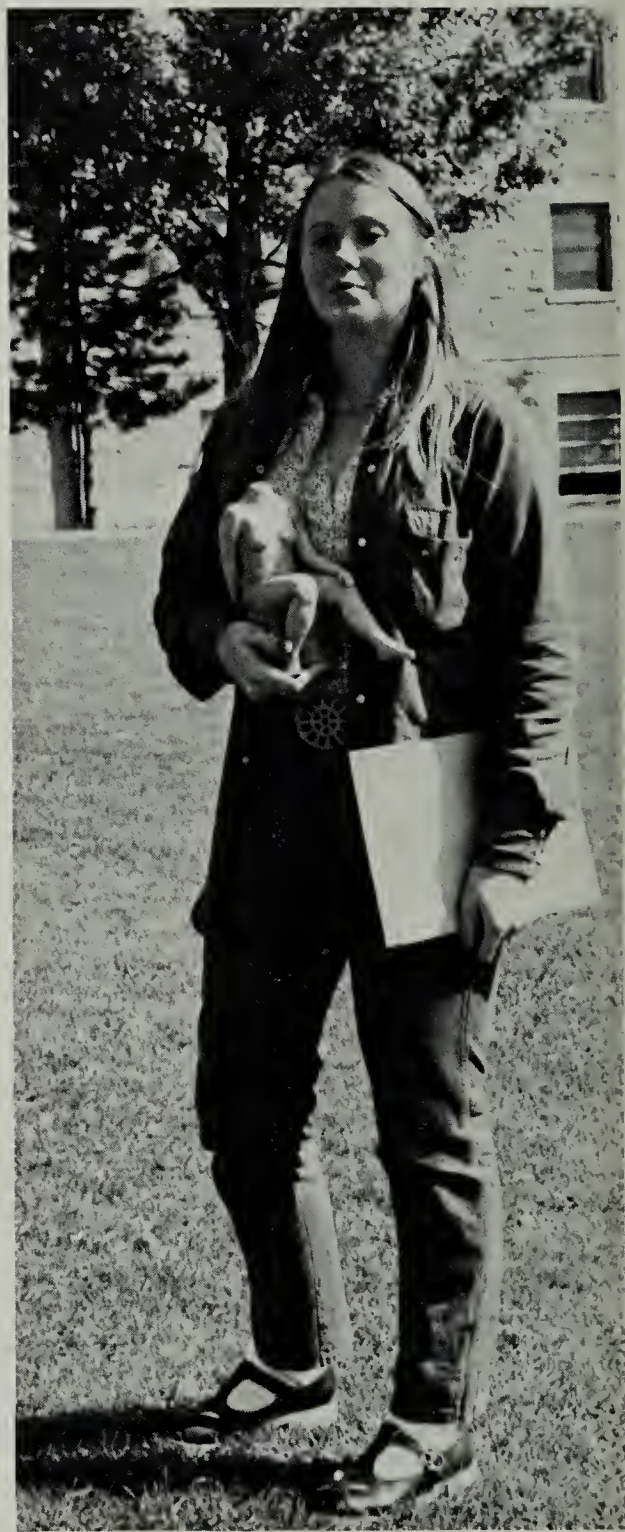

maybe this book will mean more — it might, one day, when you have forgotten all the details — when you can't quite think of your roommate's name, your mailbox combination, dorm extension, what courses you took freshman year, professor's names, one night stands — details that right now seem so important or so trivial and when you go to a restaurant and never order chicken,

but you're not sure why, maybe it's because you spent four years eating chicken
twice a week and waiting to hear
"more eggs, Valentine" at 8:15.
when this year is over,
just like last year,
just like next year,
just like all years —
maybe this book will help you to remember

Remember sneaking up to the castle roof and getting caught, cramming for exams, mutilating your I.D. card getting pizza at midnight, having the switchboard cut off a juicy conversation, trying to find change, bitching about the food, having to walk into the cafeteria alone.

writing home for money, getting drunk on Thursday, checking your mailbox
 six times a day, chasing after your advisor and wondering
 why you have one anyway, wishing it was over,
 dancing
 till the music stops, doing cartwheels
 in the quad,
 racing through the halls bursting with good news — Breaking

loose

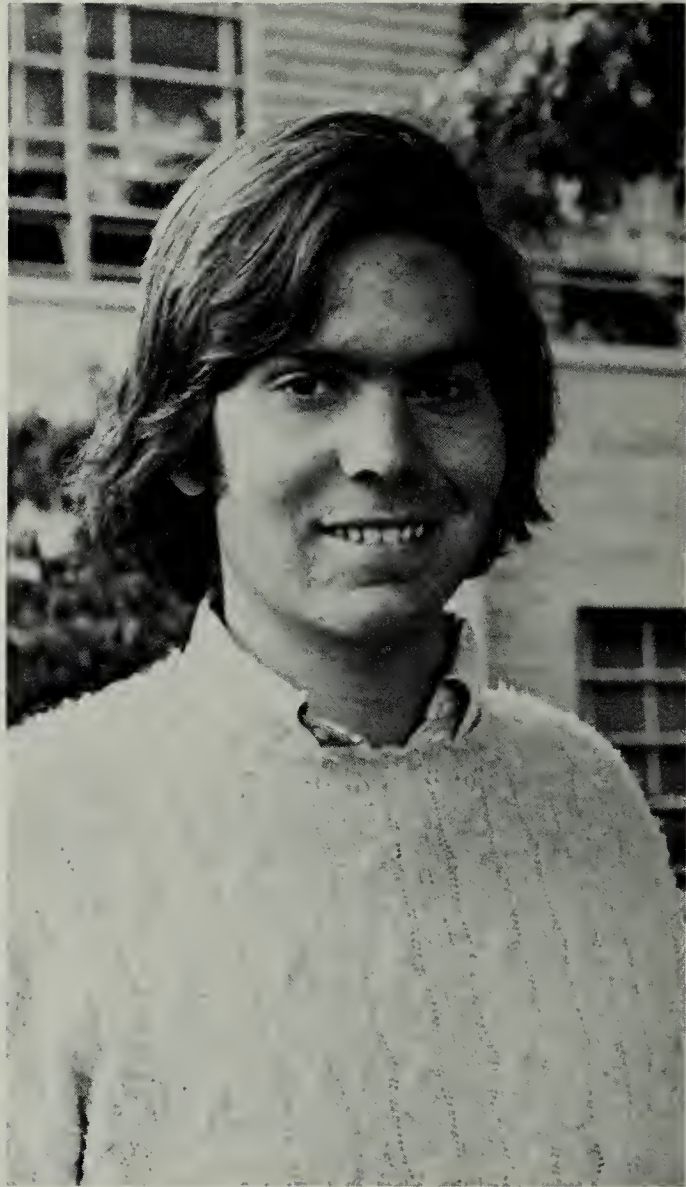

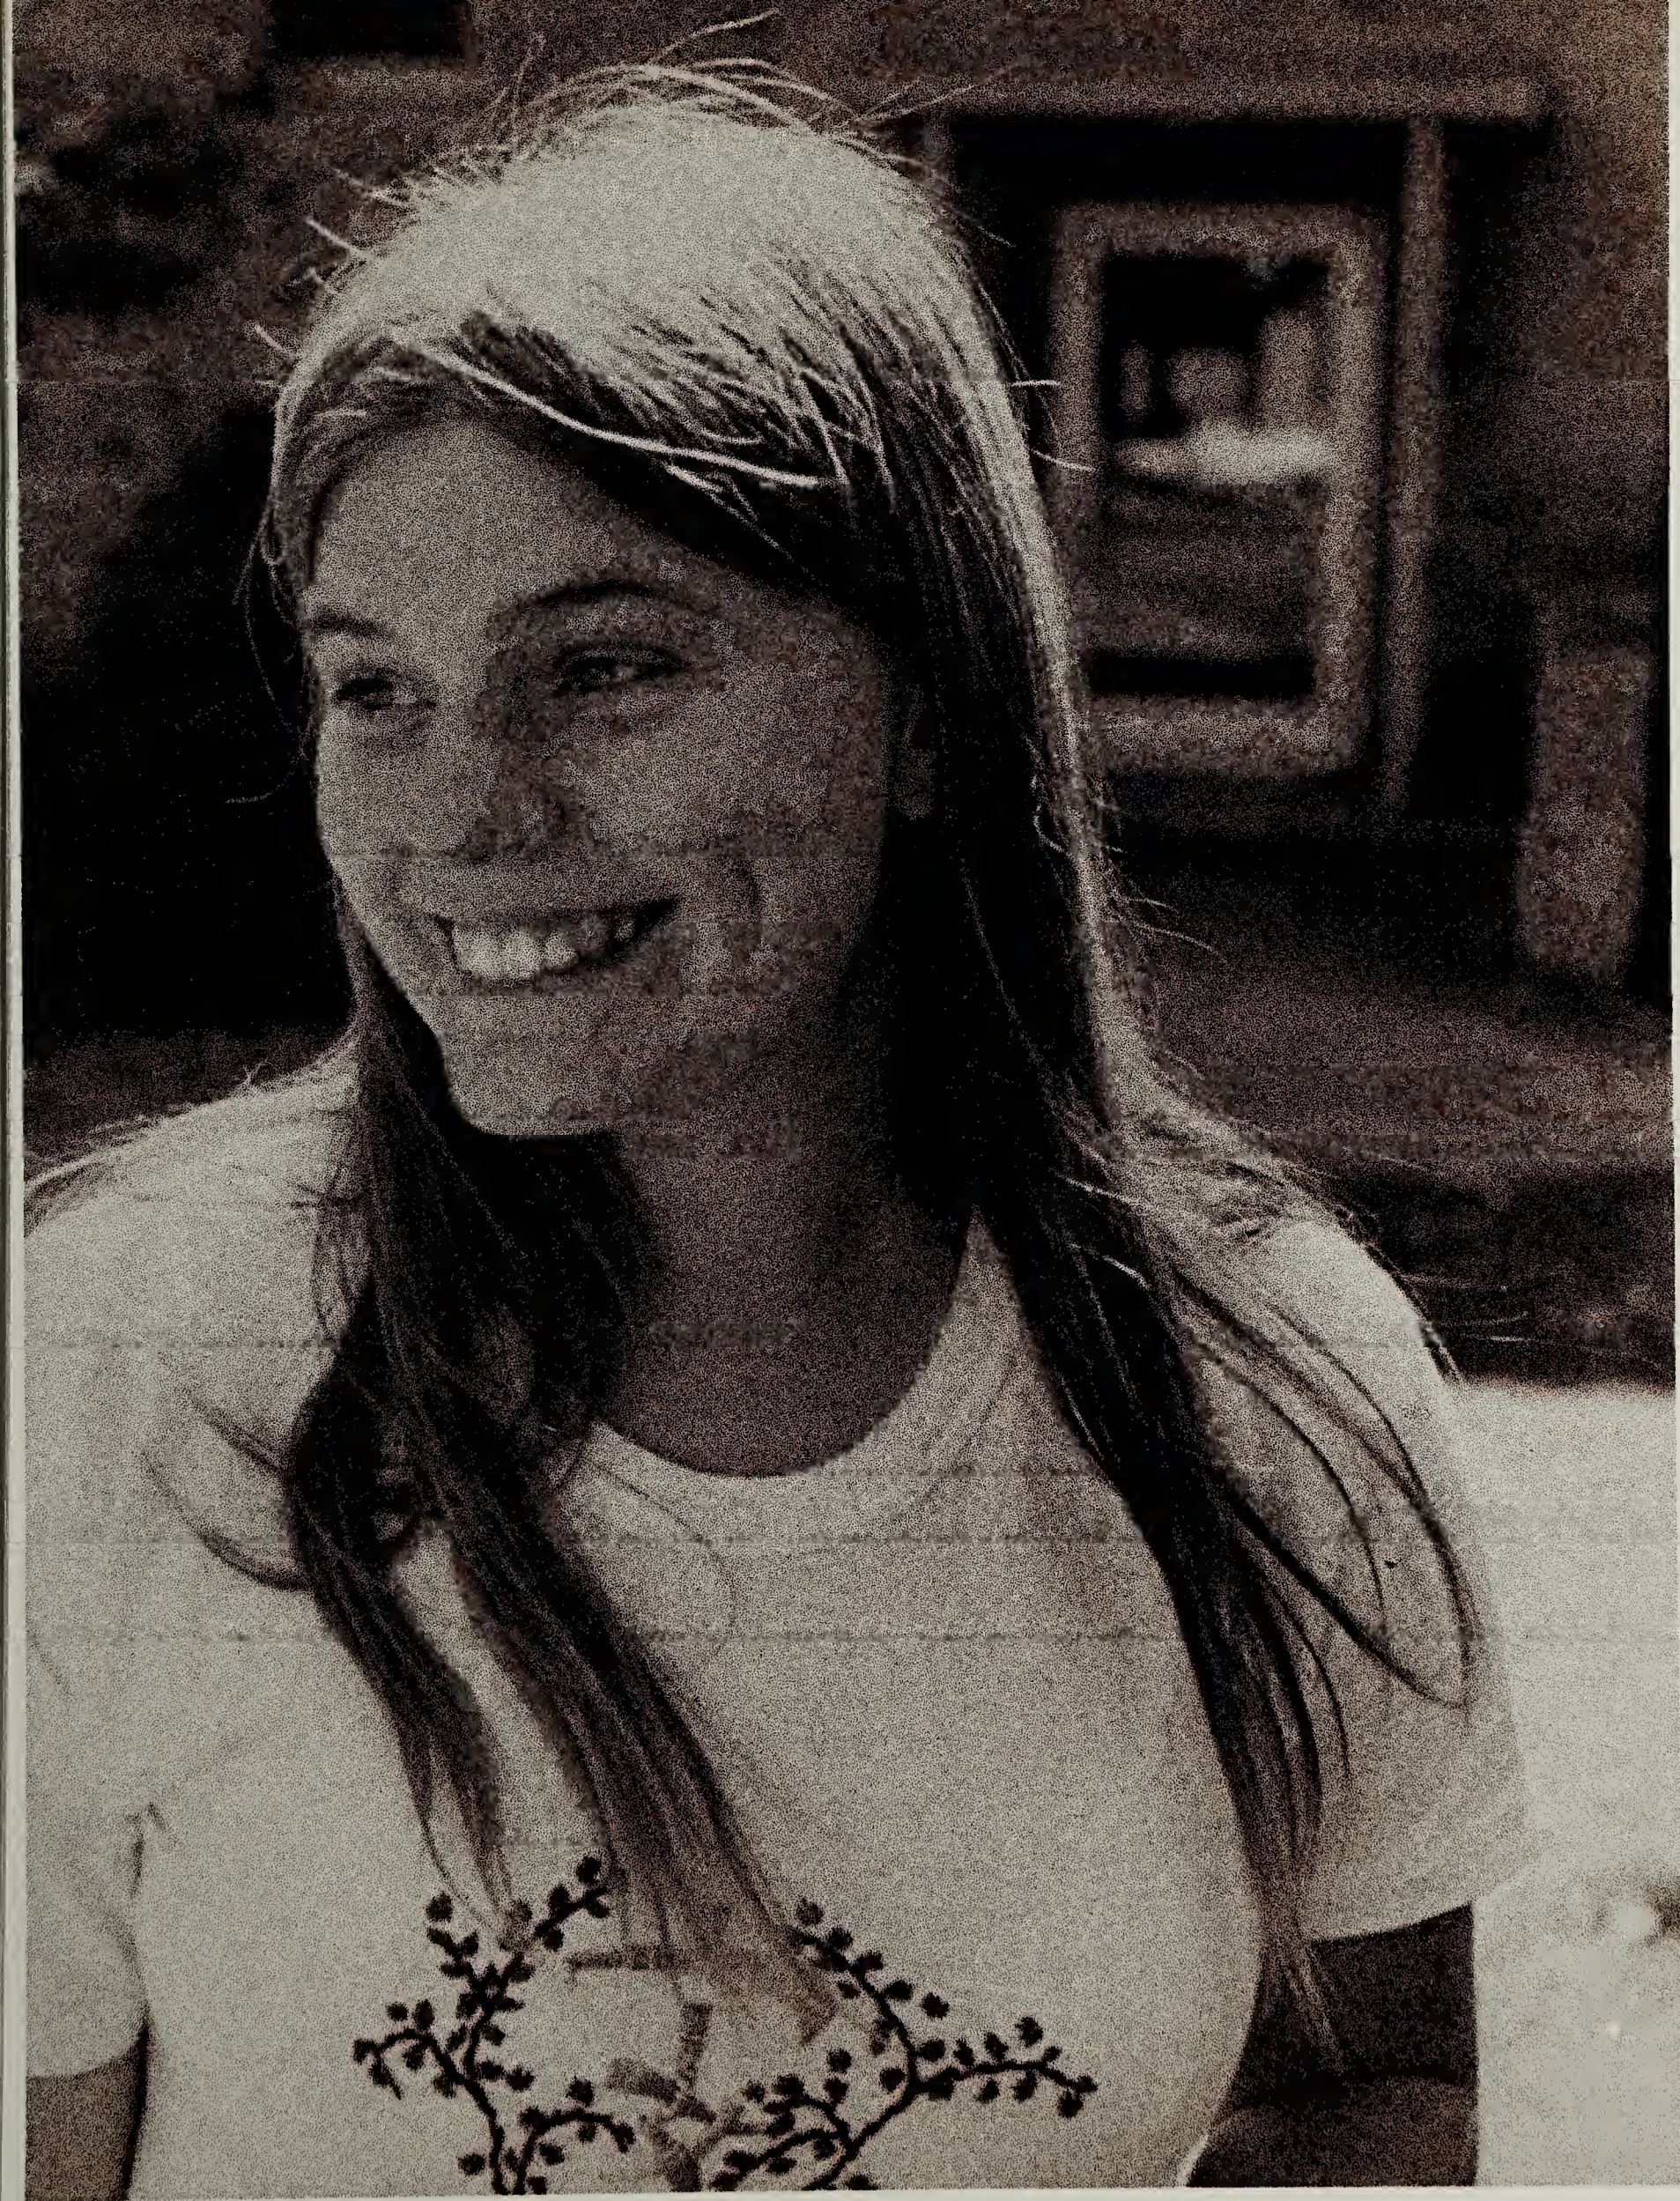

Loose enough to let your spirit glide and to ease the pressure on your mind opening up a space, a place, to stop and fantasize to think about your place in time and space, to explore your past, your present, and your future, to look inside and outside, to look all around and see what you've found, to

This book is dedicated to Voncile Davis, one of the really genuine people who make Manhattanville worth remembering.

manhattanville tower

After that first week when you've finally figured out just what AC's, OC's, and RA's are, you're ready for the big things — like preceptors and preceptorials, parties and portfolio reviews, prospective majors and practice rooms. You've got new-found freedom, week-ends spent exploring White Plains or discovering "the City."

There's a sense of going and of doing, of meeting people and making friends. All of these things slowly weave patterns that are repeated; class schedules and bus schedules are memorized — routines are formed, building a sense of order and security that gives you time to think, to grow, to accomplish.

Besides books, and exams, papers, deadlines, responsibilities, appointments, unnecessary productivity, anxiety, depression, failure, illness and disease—there's lust and desire of the flesh, double chocolate milkshakes with cherries, banana splits, and prune danish, exotic activity on the soccerfield, daydreams and night dreams of adventures on the high seas, crystal white sand dunes, and coral-filled beaches, travel brochures and aerial jumping, deciphering cave drawings and swimming the English Channel, rigyun weov iu dnjkw, fheua disowners dnehyisq, sowirxn-jfoowiens jfodpam thrth qpsht cbeoisurt sslw fhtidlw tsned.

An important criterion in assessing the timelessly valid concept of entanglement in an empty quest is the unfathomable origin of negation. Therefore, humanity, exempt from wandering inadvertently and at the vote of condemnation beyond these unnameable objects in space is validated by virtue of its existence. Being now on the threshold of the danger of servitude and without pedantic pomp or profounded with ado, there is universal agreement like the fabulous union of the cosmos and the peasants. Ergo, in the realm of rational conjecture obliquing the field of chimeras we are left again in the untamed region of clarity or overtness mentioned earlier.

Harold Delaney, President of Manhattanville College

To be free in a society whose technology tends to make us less free is perhaps the unique challenge facing us as we move closer to the twenty-first century. Meeting the challenge cannot be achieved by ignorance measured in twenty-first century terms. It cannot be met, indeed we shall perhaps succumb to it, if we passively accept the forces of antihumanism in all its guises. Manhattanville College is, therefore, dedicated to fostering the talents of the mind while giving sustenance to the gentleness of the human spirit. We all, students, faculty, administration and staff, must be active participants in that dedication, because the world stands ready to gain much from each of us.
